

After Conquering the Boy Scouts, What's Next?

Bill in the news at Canada Free Press:

William A. Donohue recognized what was happening as far back as 1993, in his booklet, "On the Front Line of the Culture War: Recent Attacks on the Boy Scouts of America," which was updated in 1996. The rest, as they say, is history.

In terms of organizations, the key group leading the legal assault on the Boy Scouts was the ACLU. Corporations like Levi Strauss and Wells Fargo also played roles by yanking funding.

Overall, in the society at large, Donohue cited the influence of the "new class," the "modern liberals" who were "usually educated at America's elite colleges and universities, who work in the media, the academy, government, and other non-profit sectors of the economy." These people, he noted, were ideologically alienated from "bourgeois" society but were "strategically placed" in New York, Washington, D.C., Hollywood, and "on the faculties of most college campuses..."

This "new class," he wrote, espouses "politically correct" thinking, consisting of "the view that any departure from the modern liberal agenda is racist, sexist or homophobic, and thus beyond the pale in modern society." READ THE FULL ARTICLE
