

Atheists Urge People to Quit Catholic Church Over Sex Abuse Scandal; Catholic League Warns Believers Are 'Being Played'

Bill In The News (Essex Caller):

Some Catholic Church defenders, such as Catholic League President Bill Donohue, have insisted throughout the scandal that church reforms are working.

"No entity in America today, private or public, has more institutionalized mechanisms in place to check for the sexual abuse of minors than the Catholic Church," Donohue said.

He pointed to statistics by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops which show that only 0.005 percent of clergy had a credible accusation made against them in the last two years.

Donohue further accused the media of ignoring the positive work that is being done to stop such abuse. READ MORE HERE
