

Behar Strikes Again

Joy Behar, a panelist on ABC's "The View," is a former Catholic who denigrates the Church at every chance she gets. Today's show proved no exception. When asked if she is superstitious, Behar remarked, "When I was a kid I used to be because the Catholic Church has a lot of that sort of thing in it, but then I sort of grew out of it."

What is clear is that Behar hasn't grown out of her obsession with blaming the Catholic Church for her own issues. Just recently, on March 26, Behar admitted her lack of knowledge about the Bible, claiming, "I never read the Bible as a child because I was Catholic."

Behar would have viewers believe that it's the fault of the Catholic Church that as a kid she was afraid of broken mirrors and too lazy to pick up a Bible. Sorry, Joy, but we're not buying it.
