

CUOMO & GAY MARRIAGE

The idea that New York Governor Andrew Cuomo, who was largely elected to fix New York State's fiscal house, is lobbying gay activists to lobby New Yorkers to support same-sex marriage is wrong politically, economically and morally. It is wrong politically because Gov. Cuomo was not elected to promote this radical agenda, and has no mandate to do so. It is wrong economically because the economic costs associated with this manipulation of marriage will help to cripple an already wobbly economy. And it is wrong morally: gay marriage will ineluctably relativize the institution of marriage, turning it into nothing more than an alternative lifestyle

The ultimate losers are not the voters. The ultimate losers are children, boys and girls who deserve a father and a mother, the only two persons ordained by nature to create them in the first place.
