

DACA Reform Means Congress Must Do Its Job

Bill in the news: Newsmax.com:

Given the normalization of hysteria in America, it was predictable that hyperbole would govern much of the discussion – if we can call it that – over the so-called Dreamers, the almost 800,000 young people who were brought to the United States illegally, mostly from Latin America. It's time to see through the Dreamers maze.

This is one problem where culpability escapes neither Party: with some important exceptions, both the Republicans and the Democrats have shown little or no interest in grappling with the macro issue of immigration, and the micro issue of the Dreamers. They would prefer that the executive branch, or the courts, handle this matter, though this is clearly the purview of the Congress. READ MORE HERE
