

Double Standard When It Comes to Sexual Harassment Reporting

Bill in the news: LifeZette:

“The Ingraham Angle” on Monday night took the Globe to task on the hypocritical stance. Host Laura Ingraham noted that the Globe’s reasoning for choosing not to reveal the name of the reporter included the fact that the incident did not involve physical violence.

But program guest Catholic League president Bill Donohue suggested that leadership at the Globe review the law before using that tired excuse. “Massachusetts law defines sexual harassment as verbal as well as physical conduct,” he said.

“These people are phonies. They’re rank hypocrites ... One standard for the Globe, and one standard for the Catholic Church,” he said. READ MORE HERE
