

MEMBERS BLAST MYERS

As soon as the September Catalyst came out, Catholic League members started bombarding Paul Myers with their comments. The Eucharist-desecrating professor from the University of Minnesota complained that “I’ve recently seen a significant surge of howling mad Catholics shrieking at me.” He ascribed the surge to Catalyst.

He’s lucky we’re Catholic, otherwise the response might have been dramatically different.

The latest barrage of criticism was actually the second surge. Myers and University officials got hit with tons of e-mails over the summer when this issue broke: we provided contact information on our news releases. Getting hit twice will surely send a message—Catholics do not take kindly to stunts like Myers pulled.

Thanks to all those who registered their concerns. Your input is positively invaluable.
