

New York Times Corrects the Record

The New York Times' recent profile of Bill Donohue contained errors and the newspaper has issued the following correction:

An article on Friday about William A. Donohue, president of the conservative Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights, erroneously attributed a comment about the movie "Angels and Demons." It was the Rev. James Martin, the culture editor of America, a liberal-leaning Jesuit magazine – not Mr. Donohue – who said: "They even have a scene where rats eat a bunch of cardinals. Can you imagine any other religion where this would not be viewed as rank religious bias?"
