

“SOUTH PARK” CREATORS ARE COWARDS

Catholic League president Bill Donohue comments on last night's episode of Comedy Central's "South Park":

The October 3rd episode of "South Park," titled "A Boy and a Priest," portrayed molesting priests as pedophiles. This is factually inaccurate: almost all the molesters—8 in 10—have been homosexuals. Therefore, the cartoon-victim characters should have been depicted as adolescents, not kids.

In Hollywood, the creators of "South Park," Trey Parker and Matt Stone, are seen as courageous. They are really cowards. It takes courage to tell the truth.

*Contact: Steve Albani, Comedy Central's senior VP,
Communications: steve.albani@cc.com*