

VICTORY FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

It took the Supreme Court to decide it was okay for Christian school clubs to have Christian officers. In 1993, the Roslyn Free School District on Long Island denied a student the right to limit officers in her Bible club to Christians. The school district claimed that such a measure was discriminatory and the student argued that her religious freedom rights would be violated if she yielded. In December, the Supreme Court sided with the student.