Catholic League president William Donohue is delighted to endorse and recommend Good News for Bad Days, a new book by Father Paul Keenan: "Written by a model priest who is known in New York for his radio talk shows, Good News for Bad Days delivers sound advice on a wide range of issues that touch everyone's life. It is not only lively and well-written, it evinces a mature understanding of what compassion really means.

"Father Keenan, who is assistant director of the Office of Communications of the Archdiocese of New York, brings his considerable pastoral experience to bear on matters that are close to the heart and soul. His book addresses personal and spiritual issues without succumbing to a pop psychology approach. That is why it is a breath of fresh air."

The book is available through your book stores, or the publisher, Warner Books. It can also be purchased through Father Keenan's website (www.FatherPaul.com) or Amazon Books (www.amazon.com). It is priced modestly at $18.
