

Washington Supreme Court tosses out state's death penalty

Bill In The News (The Spokesman-Review):

Washington's death penalty was struck down Thursday by the state's highest court, which said the law is applied arbitrarily and in a racially biased manner.

But it was criticized by the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights because Washington still has legalized abortion. READ MORE HERE