Excuse me! Your racist rant against our President does the whole Roman Catholic Church a disservice. If you could have left your rant against Dan Savage and his inflammatory remarks as just that, I could have let this go. But attacking the character of our President and Elmhurst College for allowing free and open conversation about very difficult issues facing gay and lesbian people is inexcusable. Given the recent New York Times' column exposing the pope's denunciation of women religious while at the same time defending the Roman Catholic church's position on male-only ordination and covering up sexual abuse by some of those same male-only clergy should give you pause in denouncing a College, a President and a Church willing to walk into the murky waters of human sexuality and Christian morality.

Rev. Robert Ullman, Elmhurst College Board of Trustees

P.S. I'd be very interested in how you obtained my personal email address, but please, feel free now that you have it, to respond to me. You've piqued my interest in where in the world you're coming from.
